Opus 104 was Dvorák's second and final attempt at writing a cello concerto. The first, a 50-minute work in A major, was written very early in his career (1865), when his style was still markedly derived from those of his models -- of which Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, and Schubert are most notable. He had also recently encountered the music of Richard Wagner, which perhaps helps to explain the grand scale of the work.

Cello Concerto in B Minor, Op. 104, concerto for cello and orchestra by Antonín Dvořák, premiered in London on March 19, 1896. It is one of the most frequently performed of all cello concerti, and it is admired for the richness of its orchestral music and for the lyrical writing for the solo instrument.
